Very Sensible "Japa."

In Japan the old-sohool physicians are permitted to wear only wooden swords. This is a genty surcastic way of expressing the opinion that they kill enough people without using weapons. But the druggist who introduced Dr. Pirrock's Golden Kirdler, Discovary into the Empire carries a nesteel blade. It was found that all who tried this wonderful remedy for coughs, colds, consumptive e-dencies, blood, skin and liver troubles, were, without exception, greatly benefited. The Mikado himself is said to have "fonce up" his system by its use, and the importer was therefore permitted the exceptional honor of wearing the sword of the nobility.

LYONS HANGED

He Expiates His Crime on the Gallows To-Day.

His Iron Nerve Unshaken to the Final Moment.

The Coolest Man Hangman Atkinson Ever Saw.

THE STORY OF THE MURDER.

Danny Lyons paid the death penalty for the murder of Athlete Joseph Quina at 7.12 o'clock this morning. One seeing him step forth from his cell to the gallows could scarcely realize that he was coming to face a long expected and then certain death-death by a hangman's rope.

He was dressed in a neat black Prince

Albert suit, wore clean white collar and white shirt, with a creamy cravat. His feet were incased in low black slippers, above which showed his cream-colored stockings. The ominous black cap was on his head, and beneath it was his clean-shaven face, looking all the paler through its contrast to the sable headgear. His arms were pinioned at the elbows, the cord passing behind his back. As he came out the Sheriff and his deputies, the jurymen, the physicians, Inspector Williams and other authorized witnesses of the execution stood in the courtyard. The prisoner smiled and bowed, and as gracefully as the pinions would permit waved his hands in salute.

2He walked directly to the gallows. Father Pendergast stood near him. Father Gel nas had retired, unable to witness the execution of the man to whom he had been so faithful a confessor and adviser. THE DROP PALLS.

Scarcely a moment after Lyons took his place the noose had been adjusted and the black cap pulled down. At 7.12 the signal was given, the drop fell and the body of the unfortunate man sprang upward. After the first upward move the body sank steadily down, and remained almost motionless. There was a slight movement of the limbs. After a little time the shoulder-blades moved as if coming together. That was all At 7.19 Dr. J. B. Cosby pronounced all signs of life extinct. Later the doctor said Lyons practically met an instant and almost painless death. On examination, after the body was lowered, there was found a fracture at the second cervical vertebra ALL OVER IN A MOMENT. The execution occurred much earlier than had been expected. It was finished in almost unprecedented promptness. There was nothing but the scepping to the gallows, the adjustment of the noose, the releasing of the drop, all within the space of seconds that were few.

Lyons held in his right hand a small crucifix. Over his heart he wore a small scapular with the image of the sacred heart.
Before leaving his ceil, where he renewed his prayers after taking his morning walk and coffee, Lyons asked Father Pendergast to say to the Sheriff and the others that he died as a repentant sinner: that he took his death as a punishment for his sins; that he forgave all his enemies and died hoping to be forgiven.
"JESUS HAVE MERCY ON MY SOUL."

"JERUS HAVE MERCY ON MY SOUL." As the black cap was being drawn down r Pendergast says, the condemned lips moved with the words: "Jesus

Father Pendergast says, the condemned man's lips moved with the words: "Jesus have mercy on my soul."

When the body was slightly lowered Father Pendergast took the crucifix, and also took charge of a watch which Lyons had worn, and which he wished returned to the owner. Undertaker Charles J. Coote, of 443 First avenue, drove into the court-yard a few moments after Lyons was pronounced quite dead, and at 7.40 the body was lowered beside the prepared casket.

A slight rain had begun to fall an hour before the execution, and to keep the body fore the execution, and to keep the from the dampness a rubber cloth was used.

The casket was of wood, stained in unita-tion of French beryl. It was lined with satin in cream and white. A silver plate on the cover bore this inscription :

The body was placed in the casket, which was in turn lifted into the undertaker's wagon and was driven to the shop in First avenue. Thence, with no further ceremonies, the remains were to be taken at some unsettled time this afternoon for a quiet in-

Just before the body was removed the Sheriff and his deputies marched away, and in a very short time the Fombs' interior wore again its every-day aspect.

THE NEBVIEST MAN THE HANGMAN EVER SAW. "He was the nerviest man I ever had to deal with, and I've sent fifty of them out of the world," said Hangman Atkinson as he helped place the body in the casket.

It was nearly 8 o'clock when the undertaker's wagon left the Franklin street gate, and the crowd outside made a rush to get, if possible, a glimpse of the casket.

Coote, No. 448 First avenue, and a box containing the still warm body of Lyons was hastily taken from the wagon and carried inside. A few loungers eyed the wooden receptacle suspiciously. A middle-aged man, attired in a mixed brown suit and wearing a band of deep mourning on his black derby, stood with uncovered head on the sidewalk. The news of the hanging reached the place before the body of the executed man arrived, and Lyons eagerly read the account of his stepson's bravery in meeting his inevitable doom.

"I tell you," he observed to one of his relatives—"I tell you, the boy died game."

Poor Mrs. Lyons awaited the arrival of her son's body in the house of a friend near Coote's shop. She wept constantly, and would frequently cry;
"Oh, they won't hang my Danny. They cannot be so cruel.

Word was received from Manager Sullivan shortly after 3 o'clock that the grounds would be in a fit condition for playing providing no more rain fell, and accordingly the Giants donned their uniforms and took carriages to the grounds.

Practice work had scarcely begun when the rain fell again in heavy downpours. The Glauts made a break for, the club-house and the few spectators impire Kelly picked his way among the puddles in front of the stand and declared no game, Widner was on the cards to pitch, the temporary injunction not yet being served, owing to the fact that the New Orleans Club has failed as yet to deposit the 55,000 necessary to secure the defendants from loss.

It is probable that when the case is appealed the temporary injunction will not be austained. The Washington inabagement are certain that this will be the case.

Uncertainty of Ocean Travel. There were hundreds of life preservers on the Genser, and the Captain directed the passengers to lay hold upon them. But he says they paid no attention to him and seemed dared. Had they pre-served presence of mind and seized the life-presaved. But these tragedies repeat themselves, No matter what precautions are taken, no matter what life-saving apparatus is provided, the common tendency to panic upsets all calculation, just as the striking of the Gelser amidahips instantly neutralized her compartment system and sent her to the bottom like a stone. Against such fatalities no forethought nor ingenuity can avail, and, unfortunately, these are the kind of accidents incidental to marine disasters, which so often set at maight the most elaborate provisions against collision and wreck. The Thingvalla herself barely eacaped destruction. Had there been much wind and sea she probably would have followed the Gelser to the bottom before the Wieland could have come to the rescue, and then there would have been another occan mystery.—New York Tribuses.
